Chat ‘n’ Chill continues thanks to KPCP

Chat ‘n’ Chill has found a new sponsor and will now run until April 2017 at its bases in Chislett, Kimberworth Park and the Linx Centre in Maltby. KPCP is confident it will be able to source new funding opportunities to keep it running beyond this time.

Rotherham Council’s Children and Young People’s services have made a financial contribution towards the group’s running costs, which will fund them until mid-July 2016, plus contributed the use of the Linx Centre in Maltby for their Thursday activities.

KPCP’s Youth Work Manager Dawn Heald said: “Young people and their families are both relieved and delighted at this turn of events, which they see as hopeful for the group’s future.”

Zoe Ellis, a member of the Chislett group said “I can now continue to feel supported and see people I consider family. It’s so important to me to come here, I was heartbroken it was going to end. It’s changed my life.”

Holly gives me strength

Liverpool boxer Callum Smith explains how his sister, Holly, gives him and the rest of his boxing brother’s strength.

Callum Smith is one of four boxing brothers who wear shorts with the word Autism emblazoned on them. The brothers want to raise awareness of autism and support for those who live with it.

“To see her battling through life every day, but to also see her happy, is inspiring. You see people moaning about life and you think, ‘It could be worse.’ So she does inspire us. We wear ‘Autism’ on our shorts to raise awareness and show support for other families dealing with autism, because for my mum and dad it is like a 24/7 job looking after her. When she was first diagnosed we didn’t really know what it was. So when someone asks, I explain it. We’re doing our bit.”
